Awards and publications for our Offices in Paddington

Within months of completion, our Office project in Paddington won a RIBA London Regional Award and was shortlisted for the Architect's Journal Retrofit and the Structural Timber Awards. We are looking forward to the award evening on 11th of September and the 9th of October respectively. Do get in touch if you will be there too!

The project is well described on the RIBA website, in the Oakhurst News article "Brickwork Paddington home transformed into agricultural office by Edward Williams Architects", and in The Architect's Journal.

A summer to celebrate model-making: Midland Metropolitan Hospital and Klaipeda Library models in the Architecture Room at the RA Summer Exhibition

Models of two of our projects, Midland Metropolitan Hospital and Lithuania Public Library, were showing at the Royal Academy Summer Exhibition 2019 Architecture Room, open to the public throughout its summer-long run.

The model's components were 3D printed in-house. Watch Pablo at work assembling the model in our studio here.

Raising the bar for sustainability in healthcare institutions: UCLH Phase 4 Inpatient Hospital and

Proton Beam Therapy Centre highly commended for a BREEAM Award

The highly-complex Inpatient Hospital and Proton Beam Therapy Centre for UCLH, designed in association with Scott Tallon Walker, has been "highly commended" in the prestigious BREEAM Awards 2019.

Despite the large scale equipment in the project, and the technically advanced design necessary for this central London hospital, the building has been rated Excellent by BREEAM, the world's leading sustainability assessment method.

At Edward Williams Architects, we believe that good teamwork leads to an excellent design solution. It's rewarding to see our innovative design setting new environmental benchmarks.

Research and Opinion:
How does your living room grow? Making your space work harder for its meterage

How important is it to live and work in places that have a feeling of space? Is bigger ## better?

.... "And the availability of space is reducing as the population expands and people head to cities. Increasing urbanisation means increasing densification, and densification means people living closer together. Many people think densifying means an increasingly harsh and concrete environment, but with the right quality of space - with light, green space and local amenities - densifying can give you a better quality of life."

Laura casts her vote on rising stars of the contemporary art world: the Artrooms awards

Laura will be busy selecting the most promising independent artists across the globe through a worldwide online selection to be presented to an exclusive audience of art collectors and galleries.

The Artrooms Awards grants the winning artist over £50,000 worth in prizes, a residency, online services and exhibitions. Artists practicing in all media will be applying ahead of the final show in November in London. The Awards are available for all disciplines from painting, craft, sculpture and installation, photography, video art, performance, digital art, new media (augmented reality and video mapping).

Who's joining Laura on the judging panel? art-rooms.org/awards-jurors/.
